An abstract painting with a dense, chaotic composition of thick, expressive brushstrokes. The color palette is dominated by vibrant blues, greens, yellows, and reds, with some darker tones like black and grey. The strokes vary in direction and thickness, creating a sense of movement and depth. The overall effect is one of intense energy and complexity.

December 2023

The Poetry Collection

Holiday Broadside

Featuring Hoa Nguyen and Colette Butterick

Colette Butterick (American, 1943-2020)

Untitled, May 1972

Oil on canvas, 48 x 48 in

Photograph by Julie Pavlock

BLACKBERRIES

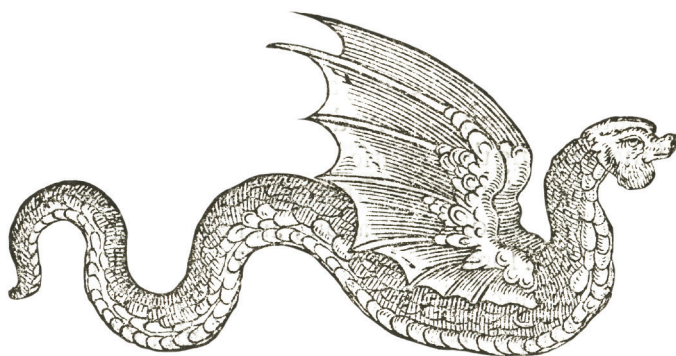

Blackberries deep black from the farm stand little seeds to grind dead & alive & ripe

Spirits taught me to write
Countless spirits writing this

Red juice I threw the book down
Furious!
Poetry you're a ripening disease

Grind write the dead

—Hoa Nguyen

This version of the Poetry Collection's 2023 holiday broadside is published in an edition of 1,600. There is also a limited edition. Copyright © 2023 The Poetry Collection of the University Libraries, University at Buffalo, The State University of New York. "Blackberries" copyright © Hoa Nguyen. Previously published in Red Juice (Wave Books, 2014) and republished with permission. Untitled painting by Colette Butterick copyright © the estate of Colette Butterick and used with permission. Dragon image from The Historie of Serpents by Edward Topsell (William Jaggard, 1608). From the personal library of Robert Duncan.